

AAP National Conference & Exhibition to be All Virtual in 2021

The recent surge in COVID-19 infections across the U.S. from the delta variant and the transmission of COVID-19 to children make it challenging for large numbers of attendees to convene safely in person and continue to protect themselves, their patients, their families, and their communities. Therefore, the 2021 American Academy of Pediatrics National Conference & Exhibition will be entirely virtual. While it is disappointing that we cannot gather in person in Philadelphia this year, the AAP remains focused on protecting the health of children and the pediatric community who cares for them.

During a time when the importance of the work we do on behalf of children has never been more apparent, we look forward to you joining the AAP virtually at our 2021 National Conference. The conference will offer outstanding education and provide opportunities for you to connect and collaborate in a virtual space, including a virtual exhibit hall and abstract program.

Details about the virtual meeting will be available soon on the National Conference website.
